

Weedy Garden: A Solo Half-Kasen

Weedy Garden

early April morning
sun shinning
off the blade of grass

the horses gallop
across the pasture

the wheels creek
approaching the glass window the old man reminiscing weekend approaching grandkids are coming

full moon
brightening the sky
with a steady breeze

the kid stares away
admiring the scene

dozens of animals
pour out
of the big red barn

the herd moving closer to the dusty white car

a couple nicks on the car from the stamped before my brother is mad

another vehicle
just a memory before

as dinner approaches
the smell of ham and chicken lightens the room

a table full of love
with family to feed

as I look across the wooden table
pumpkin pie bigger than the moon

laying on the couch
to catch my breath

full at last
i thank my mother
for a wonderful feast

I visit the garden
full of weeds

finally, they blossom
with the help of rain
